INTRODUCTION

AB 1422, recently passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor, amends California Labor Code section 4615 (“Section 4615”), among several other provisions, and confirms that lien claimants may raise any disputes concerning the applicability of the automatic stay to specific liens using existing workers’ compensation procedures. It also confirms that the Legislature never intended to strip the Workers’ Compensation Appeal Board (“WCAB”) or workers’ compensation administrative law judges (“WCALJs”) of jurisdiction to determine whether a lien falls into the category of liens subject to the stay. AB 1422 thus verifies Defendants’ interpretation of the statute and the showing that has been made on this motion in support of that interpretation. The amendment to the statute should resolve any lingering concern as to whether lien claimants have access to process and procedures in order to dispute whether the provisions of Section 4615 apply to their liens.

After several rounds of briefing and the submission of evidence, Plaintiffs still have not established that they are entitled to a preliminary injunction, nor can they do so. They have not established a likelihood of success on the merits, and they have not shown any irreparable harm that will result absent a preliminary injunction. In fact, in light of AB 1422, the public interest weighs even more heavily against the issuance of an injunction invalidating the statute. The issuance of an injunction now, when AB 1422 will go into effect on January 1, 2018, would result in a roughly three-month window in which no liens would be stayed and criminally-charged medical providers would race to the workers’ compensation courts in a mad dash effort to demand and collect payment on their liens before AB 1422 goes into effect.

Significantly, Plaintiffs most recent brief makes clear that they are asking this Court to void Section 4615 in its entirety, an outcome that would enable criminally-charged lien claimants to continue collecting on their liens unabated while criminal

1 charges against them are pending. In their brief, Plaintiffs no longer focus on 2 whether isolated mistakes have been made within the workers' compensation 3 Electronic Adjudication Management System (EAMS) in the flagging of liens as 4 "stayed" or whether some WCALJs have made mistakes in hearing disputes as to 5 whether the stay applies to particular liens. What Plaintiffs are requesting is not an 6 injunction addressing how disputes concerning the applicability of Section 4615 to 7 particular liens may be raised in workers' compensation courts, something that is 8 clearly addressed by existing procedures. Rather, their demand is for the Court to 9 declare the statute unconstitutional and unenforceable in its entirety. For all the 10 reasons addressed in the briefing, that demand has no merit. Plaintiffs motion for 11 preliminary injunction should be denied.

12 ARGUMENT

13 I. THE EFFECT OF AB 1422 ON THE CURRENT LITIGATION

14 AB 1422, which was enrolled on September 15, 2017 and signed by Governor 15 Brown on September 26, 2017, adds, among other provisions, the following new 16 subdivision (e) to Section 4615:

17 The automatic stay required by this section shall not preclude 18 the appeals board from inquiring into and determining within a 19 workers' compensation proceeding whether a lien is stayed 20 pursuant to subdivision (a) or whether a lien claimant is controlled by a physician, practitioner, or provider.

21 A.B. 1422, 2017-2018 Reg. Sess. (Cal. 2017). The effect of this new language on 22 Plaintiffs' preliminary injunction motion is substantial. It specifically addresses the 23 procedural due process issues about which the Court has expressed concerns by 24 confirming that nothing in Section 4615 precludes the appeals board from 25 determining whether the automatic stay applies to a specific lien (i.e., whether that 26 lien falls within the category of liens subject to the automatic stay).

1 This Court has previously determined that “the statutory language [of Section 2 4615] is ambiguous.” Aug. 31, 2017 Tentative Ruling at 5. Where “a statute is 3 ambiguous . . . a subsequent expression of the Legislature as to the intent of the 4 prior statute, although not binding on the court, may properly be used in 5 determining the effect of a prior act.” Cal. Emp’t Stabilization Comm’n v. Payne, 6 31 Cal. 2d 210, 213–14 (1947); see also Guillen v. Schwarzenegger, 147 Cal. App.
7 4th 929, 945 (2007) (“Although subsequent declarations of the Legislature are not 8 binding authority, they are appropriate for the court to consider as evidence of the 9 original legislative intent for a measure.”).¹ Clarifying legislation passed soon after 10 the initial statutory provision was enacted is entitled to greater weight than usual.
11 “An amendment which in effect construes and clarifies a prior statute must be 12 accepted as the legislative declaration of the meaning of the original act, where the 13 amendment was adopted soon after the controversy arose concerning the proper 14 interpretation of the statute” Carter v. Cal. Dep’t of Veterans Affairs, 38 Cal.
15 4th 914, 923 (2006).

16 AB 1422 illuminates the original intent of Section 4615. It clarifies that in 17 enacting Section 4615, the Legislature intended for workers’ compensation judges 18 and the WCAB to maintain jurisdiction to determine within the pre-existing 19 workers’ compensation procedures whether the Section 4615 stay applies to a 20 particular lien. Because AB 1422 was passed within a year of Section 4615, it 21 carries great weight in the analysis of the Legislature’s intent in enacting Section 22 4615. Even though AB 1422 will not go into effect until January 1, 2018, it offers 23 clarification to the WCAB and WCALJs charged with administering Section 4615, 24 and there is no reason to think that they will ignore or act contrary to the 25 amendment. In fact, the amendment confirms instructions received from Chief

26 ¹ Federal courts look to state law in considering questions of statutory 27 interpretation of state laws. Goldman v. Salisbury, 70 F.3d 1028, 1029 (9th Cir.
28 1995) (“[W]e are ‘bound by California rules of construction in our independent interpretation of the California statutes at issue.’” (quoting Anderson v. Anderson, 824 F.2d 754, 756 (9th Cir. 1987))).

1 Judge Levy (see Dkt. 42-1 at ¶ 9) and eliminates any doubt as to whether WCALJs 2 have jurisdiction to consider the applicability of the stay.

3 The Governor’s signing statement regarding AB 1422 is also instructive on the 4 meaning and intention of the statute. While not binding on this Court, “[a] 5 Governor’s written memoranda issued upon signature of a bill is admissible on the 6 issue of the Legislature’s intent.” In re Carr, 65 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1535 (1998); 7 see also People v. Ledesma, 16 Cal. 4th 90, 100 (1997) (considering Governor’s 8 signing statement in interpreting amendment to statute). Governor Brown’s signing 9 message for AB 1422 states that the bill “confirms that the Workers’ Compensation 10 Appeals Board retains jurisdiction to resolve disputes about the applicability of the 11 automatic stay provision to specific liens” and that the bill “is declaratory of 12 existing law which provides for the resolution of these disputes through the Board’s 13 current practices and procedures.” Dkt. 56-1 at 15.

14 Plaintiffs argue that because AB 1422 refers only to “the appeals board,” 15 jurisdiction to determine whether the stay applies to a specific lien lies only with 16 the WCAB and not the WCALJs. Dkt. 58 at 3. However, numerous sections 17 within Division 4 of the Labor Code refer generically to the “appeals board” as 18 meaning the entire workers’ compensation adjudication system, including both the 19 WCALJs and the Commissioners of the WCAB. For example, Labor Code section 20 5300 lists the types of proceedings that “shall be instituted before the appeals board 21 and not elsewhere, except as otherwise provided in Division 4,” then proceeds to 22 list exactly the types of matters WCALJs handle in workers’ compensation 23 proceedings on a daily basis. This section plainly does not mean that workers’ 24 compensation cases must be filed in the WCAB office in San Francisco; all cases 25 are filed in the WCAB district offices and heard in the first instance by WCALJs.
26 See, e.g., Cal. Lab. Code §§ 4903, 4903.05, 4903.1, 5301-5304 (all referring to 27 “appeals board” in a context that clearly refers to the trial level WCAB district 28 offices and WCALJs). Department of Workers’ Compensation regulations confirm 1 this meaning, stating that “[i]n any case that has been regularly assigned to a 2 workers’ compensation judge, the judge shall have full power, jurisdiction and 3 authority to hear and determine all issues of fact and law presented and to issue any 4 interim, interlocutory and final orders, findings, decisions and awards as may be 5 necessary to the full adjudication of the case.” Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 10348.

6 The same section goes on to say that “[o]rders, findings, decisions and awards 7 issued by a workers’ compensation judge shall be the orders, findings, decisions 8 and awards of the Workers’ Compensation Appeals Board unless reconsideration is 9 granted.” Id.; see also Cal. Lab. Code §§ 5309, 5310 (the appeals board appoints 10 workers’ compensation judges to hear and determine issues). These statutes and 11 regulations, taken together, demonstrate that AB 1422’s reference to “the appeals 12 board” refers to the entirety of the workers’ compensation adjudication system, 13 including the WCALJs at the initial filing and trial level, and the WCAB for 14 matters taken up by petition for reconsideration or removal.

15 The new subdivision added via AB 1422 states that the Section 4615 stay 16 “shall not preclude” the appeals board from determining whether the stay applies to 17 a lien. Plaintiffs argue that this language leaves to the discretion of the WCALJs 18 whether to consider the applicability of the stay because it does not explicitly 19 require them to do so. On the contrary, “shall not preclude” simply means that the 20 stay does not change the existing regulations and procedures that give the WCAB 21 and WCALJs the authority to decide any issue necessary to the adjudication of a 22 lien. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 10348 (“the judge shall have full power, jurisdiction 23 and authority to hear and determine all issues of fact and law presented . . .”). AB 24 1422 clarifies that nothing in Section 4615 was intended to alter or remove that 25 authority, which allows the WCALJs and WCAB to decide any and all issues using 26 the regular workers’ compensation procedures.

27 Plaintiffs argue that AB 1422 is unhelpful to Defendants because it confirms 28 that the Section 4615 stay is, in fact, automatic. Dkt. 58 at 5. Once again Plaintiffs

1 conflate the question of whether the stay applies to a specific lien with the question 2 of whether lien claimants charged with workers' compensation or other medical 3 fraud can argue that all or some of their liens should escape the automatic stay 4 because they are "untainted" or unrelated to the charged activity. Whether the stay 5 is automatic has never been a question in this litigation. Defendants have 6 repeatedly stated their position, derived from the plain language of the statute, that 7 the stay is automatic for those liens that fall within the category establish by Section 8 4615—those liens filed "by or on behalf of a physician or provider of medical 9 treatment" who have been charged with "an offense involving fraud against the 10 workers' compensation system, medical billing fraud, insurance fraud, or fraud 11 against the Medicare or Medi-Cal programs." Cal. Lab. Code § 4615(a).
12 Determining whether a lien was actually filed "by or on behalf of" a medical 13 provider who has been charged with one of the types of fraud listed in the statute is 14 a separate question, and, as AB 1422 confirms, one which the WCALJs and WCAB 15 can resolve.

16 II. PLAINTIFFS HAVE NOT MEET THEIR BURDEN IN ESTABLISHING THAT 17 PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IS MERITED

18 Throughout the briefing on their preliminary injunction motion, Plaintiffs have 19 departed from the elements they need to establish in order to show that they are 20 entitled to a preliminary injunction, in the apparent hope that the parade of horrors 21 they continually recite will be sufficient to convince this Court to strike down 22 Section 4615 as facially invalid. But the evidence presented does not establish 23 irreparable harm or a likelihood of success on the merits. Injunctive relief is "an 24 extraordinary remedy that may only be awarded upon a clear showing that the 25 plaintiff is entitled to such relief." Winter v. Natural Resources Defense Council, 26 Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 22 (2008). In order to succeed on a motion for preliminary 27 injunction, Plaintiffs must show: (1) that they are likely to succeed on the merits; 28 (2) they are likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief;

1 (3) that the balance of equities tips in their favor; and (4) that an injunction would 2 be in the public interest. Id. at 20. Plaintiffs have not met a single one of these 3 elements, despite having several rounds of briefing in which to do so.

4 A. Plaintiffs Have Not Met Their Burden in Establishing the Facial 5 Invalidity of the Statute

6 Plaintiffs reiterate in their supplemental brief that their claims present a facial 7 challenge to Section 4615, not an as-applied challenge. They further argue that 8 because the challenge is a facial challenge, this Court cannot offer any form of 9 relief aside from the complete invalidation of Section 4615 in its entirety.

10 Plaintiffs' insistence on the invalidation of the entire statute is not addressed to their 11 own particular due process concerns, but rather seeks to allow all lien claimants to 12 continue to collect on all lien claims, an outcome that would enable criminally-13 charged providers, as noted above, to continue to demand and to collect payment on 14 all liens notwithstanding the pending criminal charges. That demand is at odds 15 with the well-established principle that courts "neither want nor need to provide 16 relief to nonparties when a narrower remedy will fully protect the litigants." U.S. v.
17 Nat'l Treasury Emps. Union, 513 U.S. 454, 478 (1995) (emphasis added).

18 Plaintiffs have not met the stringent burden required to establish that a statute 19 is unconstitutional on its face. They have not demonstrated that "the law is 20 unconstitutional in all of its applications." Los Angeles v. Patel, 135 S. Ct. 2443, 21 2451 (quoting Washington State Grange v. Washington State Repub. Party, 552 22 U.S. 442, 449 (2008)). Plaintiffs also have not demonstrated that Section 4615 is 23 unconstitutional as applied to them, and even if they could establish that Section 24 4615 is being unconstitutionally applied to parties not before this court, that would 25 be insufficient to support the invalidation of the statute. Parker v. Levy, 417 U.S.
26 733, 756 (1974). Plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction invalidating the 27 statute on its face should be denied.
28

1 B. Plaintiffs Have Not Established Any Due Process Violation

2 Along with their briefs, Plaintiffs have submitted declarations and exhibits 3 consisting of no more than conclusory allegations from a variety of declarants—4 most of whom are not parties to this litigation—that there is no process available to 5 challenge the applicability of the Section 4615 stay to particular liens. See Dkt. 55 6 at 4, n.6. Missing from Plaintiffs’ submissions is any evidence establishing that the 7 Plaintiffs or other lien claimants attempted to follow the procedures set out in the 8 existing regulations and described in Judge Levy’s declaration, such as filing a 9 petition or declaration of readiness, and had those efforts rejected or rebuffed. Dkt.
10 42-1 at ¶¶ 14-15. Thus, Plaintiffs are not entitled to any relief, much less the 11 invalidation of Section 4615.

12 Plaintiffs argue that if, as this Court held in its July 13, 2017 Tentative Ruling, 13 lien claimants have an underlying protectable interest in their liens, then each 14 charged medical provider is entitled to a hearing about whether the lien arises from 15 criminal activity before the lien may be stayed. Dkt. 58 at 14. This assertion is 16 incorrect. The nature of the underlying protected right is critical to the 17 determination of what process is required (i.e., what process is “due”) in order to 18 satisfy the due process clause. “[O]nce it is determined that the Due Process Clause 19 applies, ‘the question remains what process is due.’” Cleveland Bd. of Educ. v.
20 Loudermill, 470 U.S. 532, 541 (1985) (citing Morrissey v. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471, 21 481 (1972)). The Due Process Clause requires only “notice and opportunity for 22 hearing appropriate to the nature of the case.” Pinnacle Armor, Inc. v. United 23 States, 648 F.3d 708, 717 (9th Cir. 2011).

24 It is crucial to recall, as this lengthy briefing and argument process comes to a 25 close, that there is a specific analytical framework that must be applied when a due 26 process challenge is alleged. Throughout the briefing, Plaintiffs have avoided 27 confronting that analysis, relying instead on generalities, inflated rhetoric, and 28 broad allegations. Assuming an underlying protected interest, courts apply the 1 Mathews v. Eldridge balancing test to determine whether a due process violation

2 has been shown. Under this test, courts are to examine: “[f]irst, the private interest 3 that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous 4 deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if 5 any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the 6 Government’s interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and 7 administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement 8 would entail.” Wilkinson v. Austin, 545 U.S. 209, 224-25 (2005) (quoting Mathews 9 v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976)). One final analysis here of these three 10 factors demonstrates that Plaintiffs have failed to establish a due process violation.

11 First, as explained at length in Defendants’ previous supplemental brief, filed 12 August 8, 2017, a lien is not certain income, and lien claimants’ underlying interest 13 in their liens, to the extent they have such an interest, is necessarily limited and 14 circumscribed by statute. Dkt. 42 at 11-13. The impairment of that interest, if any, 15 resulting from Section 4615 is slight because the stay applies only temporarily and 16 all liens will be adjudicated in due course following the disposition of the criminal 17 charges. Cal. Lab. Code § 139.21.

18 Second, though the risk of erroneous deprivation of an interest is a factor in 19 determining what process is required, the Due Process Clause does not require that 20 the procedures used to guard against an erroneous deprivation . . . be so 21 comprehensive as to preclude any possibility of error.” Mackey v. Montrym, 443
22 U.S. 1, 13 (1979). The record before this Court, including the Levy Declaration 23 and exhibits, demonstrate both that the risk of errors in the current system under 24 Section 4615 is low, and that, in the event errors do occur, there are procedures 25 available for litigants to raise the issues within the workers’ compensation system, 26 and to have those errors corrected. The existence of this “process” to protect 27 against any potential errors has now been confirmed by the provisions of AB 1422
28 and the Governor’s Signing Message. Plaintiffs have made no showing whatsoever

1 of the “probable value” of any additional procedures. That is because Plaintiffs do 2 not seek additional procedures; they simply want the statute declared unenforceable 3 in its entirety, which would permit criminally-charged providers to continue to 4 collect on their liens without hindrance.²

5 Third, the government’s interest in the adoption and implementation of 6 Section 4615 is compelling. That interest is in preventing crime and fraud in the 7 workers’ compensation system, for the benefit of injured workers, employers and 8 insurers; in preventing payments on liens arising from fraudulent activity, either 9 while charges are pending or following conviction, so as not to incentivize such 10 conduct; and in not overburdening the system with the handling of potentially 11 fraudulent liens while criminal charges are pending. Liens arising from criminal 12 activity within the workers’ compensation system create tremendous fiscal and 13 administrative burdens. In order to ensure that monies are not demanded and paid 14 out on such liens while criminal charges are pending, the Legislature made the 15 sound fiscal and policy decision to stay those liens temporarily until the criminal 16 charges are resolved, after which the liens are then adjudicated. To impose the 17 ² The record before this Court concerning Dr. Michael Allan Rudolph 18 provides just one example on this issue. Dr. Rudolph states in the declaration he 19 filed on behalf of Plaintiffs that he has not personally been charged with any of the 20 types of fraud listed in the statute, but because he shares a first and last name with a 21 physician who has been charged, certain of his liens were erroneously flagged as 22 stayed in the EAMS system. Dkt. 53 at 33, ¶ 5; 34, ¶ 7. Dr. Rudolph does not 23 assert in his declaration, however, that he made any effort to alert DWC to the 24 problem in order to have it corrected or that he attempted to use any of the available 25 procedures to raise the issue with a WCALJ. Instead, he asserts only that “I have 26 learned . . . that there does not appear to be any system or procedure to address the 27 fact that I am the victim of mistaken identity” Dkt. 53 at 34, ¶ 9. Moreover, 28 and curiously, the list of liens Dr. Rudolph attached in support of his declaration (Exhibit 25, Dkt. 53-27) were all several years old, dating from 2009 to 2012, with no recent activity showing for the vast majority of those cases. More curiously, and significantly, the Declaration of Paige Levy that had previously been filed included as an exhibit a Pre-Trial Conference Statement in a case called Blanca Torres v.

Ability Pathways, WCAB Case No. ADJ 9703451. Dkt. 42-1, at 83-90. That document shows that a lien trial had been set for August 30, 2017 to determine, among other issues, whether the lien of Dr. Michael Allan Rudolph was subject to a Section 4615 stay. Dkt. 42-1, at 85, 88. Thus, the evidence shows that Dr.
Rudolph has, in fact, been able to avail himself of the available processes to challenge the applicability of the stay to a lien filed on his behalf by Rudolph Multi Specialty. Dkt. 42-1 at 83-90.

1 “additional or substitute procedural requirement” apparently demanded by Plaintiffs 2 —that the litigants and WCALJs determine whether specific liens arise from or 3 relate to criminal activity before they are stayed and before the criminal charges 4 are even resolved—would create substantial additional fiscal and administrative 5 burdens for all parties and for the system, and would cause substantial harm to 6 injured workers and the public by continuing to incentivize criminal activity.

7 Clearly, when the Mathews due process balancing test is applied, Plaintiffs 8 have not, and cannot, establish any due process violation. AB 1422 clarifies that 9 the existing workers’ compensation procedures set out in the statute and 10 regulations, and described in Judge Levy’s declaration, are available to lien 11 claimants who believe their liens have been erroneously stayed under Section 4615.
12 Plaintiffs’ preliminary injunction motion should be denied.

13 C. Plaintiff Anguizola Has Not Established a Sixth Amendment 14 Violation

15 Though Plaintiffs try to resurrect their Sixth Amendment claim in their 16 supplemental brief, they offer no explanation regarding how AB 1422 affects that 17 claim in any way. Instead they reiterate the same arguments this Court has already 18 rejected, based on their belief that the Court “was mistaken” and that Plaintiffs had 19 insufficient space in their opening brief to thoroughly address the issue.

20 As this Court has previously stated, “a lien filed within the state’s already 21 complicated regulatory framework is simply not the equivalent to money held, free 22 and clear in a personal bank account.” July 13, 2017 Tentative Ruling at 13. Thus, 23 the distinction between tainted and untainted assets established in Luis v. United 24 States, 136 S. Ct. 1083 (2016) is not determinative in this context. Even if Luis 25 were applicable here, the Court further acknowledged that Plaintiffs’ evidence is 26 insufficient to establish that Dr. Anguizola, the only Plaintiff who asserts a Sixth 27 Amendment claim, “has no personal assets with which to mount his defense,” that 28 he would “immediately gain access to funds” were Section 4615 enjoined, or that

1 the alleged effects on Dr. Anguizola “are in any way typical of the providers that 2 Statute effects generally.” Plaintiffs have offered no reason why the Court should 3 revisit these determinations.

4 Plaintiffs repeatedly reference comments made by Director Christine Baker in 5 support of the Sixth Amendment claim. But not only do Ms. Baker’s comments not 6 evidence a Sixth Amendment violation, as shown in previous filings, they have no 7 relevance to that claim. The comments of an agency director charged with 8 administering a statute in no way reflect the Legislature’s intent in enacting a bill.
9 If a “legislator’s personal understanding of a bill does not indicate the Legislature’s 10 collective intent in enacting that bill,” there is no logical reason why an agency 11 director’s understanding would have any weight at all. See Carter, 38 Cal. 4th at 12 929. Furthermore, the California Supreme Court has stated that it will not “in 13 holding up the Legislature’s actions to the light of the Constitution . . . inquire into 14 underlying motives; our review is confined to determining whether an action itself 15 is at odds with constitutional imperatives.” Howard Jarvis Taxpayer Assn. v.
16 Padilla, 62 Cal. 4th 486, 521 (2016).

17 D. Plaintiffs Have Not Established Irreparable Harm

18 Plaintiffs include in their supplemental brief a laundry list of six purported 19 irreparable harms that one or more of them allegedly have suffered or will suffer in 20 the absence of a preliminary injunction. Dkt. 58 at 7. None of them is an actual 21 irreparable harm that would support the issuance of a preliminary injunction in this 22 case.

23 First, Plaintiffs assert the deprivation of Dr. Anguizola’s Sixth Amendment 24 right to hire an attorney of his choosing, but this Court has already rejected the 25 Sixth Amendment claim and there is no reason it should do otherwise now.

26 Second, Plaintiffs claim that they are “threatened with being driven out of 27 business,” but providers are not required to treat workers’ compensation applicants 28 or provide services on a lien basis. They choose to do so with full knowledge that

1 the resulting liens will be contingent and uncertain. Chorn v. Workers’
2 Compensation Appeals Bd., 245 Cal. App. 4th 1370, 1389 (2016).

3 Third, Plaintiffs assert that the loss of reputation and good will is an 4 irreparable injury, but the fact that a medical provider has been charged with a 5 crime is public information even without Section 4615 and the list of charged 6 providers posted on the Department of Industrial Relations website.

7 Fourth, Plaintiffs state that financial losses unrecoverable due to Eleventh 8 Amendment sovereign immunity constitute an irreparable injury. But the Section 9 4615 stay results in only a temporary delay in collecting on liens, not a total 10 financial loss. Furthermore, the Eleventh Amendment would not bar a lien 11 claimant from recovering any wrongly denied funds because those funds are paid 12 by the employers and insurers that participate in the workers’ compensation system, 13 not the state itself.

14 Fifth, Plaintiffs argue that interference with a federal right may constitute 15 irreparable harm; and sixth, Plaintiffs point to the principle that a deprivation of a 16 constitutional right always constitutes an irreparable harm. But both of these 17 potential harms are contingent on establishing a likelihood of success on the merits, 18 which Plaintiffs have failed to do here. An alleged constitutional infringement will 19 not constitute irreparable harm where “the constitutional claim is too tenuous” to 20 support such a finding. Goldie’s Bookstore v. Sup. Ct., 739 F.2d 466, 472 (9th Cir.
21 1984). The same is true of relying on interference with a federal right to establish a 22 Constitutional claim. In fact, in the case Plaintiffs cite, the district court found that 23 the plaintiff had “not shown that it is likely to prevail on its claim that the State has 24 interfered with its federal rights” and thus “has not shown that it is likely to suffer 25 this type of irreparable harm.” Tohono O’odham Nation v. Ducey, 130 F. Supp. 3d 26 1301, 1319 (D. Az. 2015).

27 In contrast, if this Court were to grant the injunction Plaintiffs demand, the 28 workers’ compensation system, including injured workers, would suffer substantial

1 harm as a result. If the Court were to declare invalid the current version of Section 2 4615, as Plaintiffs demand, the amended version of the statute would still go into 3 effect as of January 1, 2018.³ This would leave an approximately three-month 4 window during which criminally-charged providers and entities who have filed 5 liens on their behalf would rush to file petitions and declarations of readiness to 6 proceed in order to have their liens heard and adjudicated, and rush to demand 7 settlements and payments, before the revised statute goes into effect. The burden 8 on the workers' compensation system due to this increase in volume would be 9 tremendous. The increase in traffic would make it difficult for other parties—10 including injured workers—to have their issues and cases adjudicated. And the 11 money paid out on the liens filed by or on behalf of criminally-charged providers 12 that may later be determined to have resulted from criminal activity is unlikely to 13 ever be recovered.

14 CONCLUSION

15 For the reasons stated above and throughout the briefing on Plaintiffs' motion 16 for preliminary injunction, Defendants respectfully request that the Court deny the 17 motion in its entirety.

³If Plaintiffs seek to proceed with this action following January 1, 2018, they 28 will likely need to seek leave to amend their complaint, as the current complaint challenges a statute that will no longer exist in the same form as of that date.
